The move aims to empower citizens to take advantage of blockchain and digital assets as a means to save time and money. The decision was announced by the Ministry of Economy and Industry. They also announced a public tender whereby contractors will collaborate with local and national entities to design a strategic blockchain-based platform. The tender will be run by the largest telecom company in Bahrain, Batelco. This decision followed a unanimous vote of the House of Representatives of Bahrain on Tuesday, that classified cryptocurrencies as a legal medium for exchange. This is significant considering it is the first time that a government has made an official decision with regard to digital currency in any Arab country. The decision does not appear to have been made based on the size of the country or the overall economy of Bahrain. Rather, it appears to be an inevitable consequence of the country's lack of use of technology in its day to day activities. The tender announcement notes: "The Bahraini government will use this technology to monitor the economy of Bahrain and ease manual processes of government transactions. The goal is to cut red tape and increase government efficiency." These objectives are b7e8df5c8
